Homework Assignment

Mathematics 123
A. U. Thor
Wednesday, April 11, 2001

Heading 2

Select, and then delete, the text in this document and replace it with your own. We have included a sample of each element that you can use. You can replace this shell document with your own. To do so, modify this document so that it is the way you want it, then save it in the `Shells\General` directory as "Homework - with Instructions.shl." Remember to change the file extension from .tex to .shl.

Heading 3

To create a heading, type the text of the heading as a separate paragraph, and then with the insertion point in the paragraph, choose from Heading 1 through Heading 5 from the middle popup list at the bottom of the screen.

> To center a paragraph, place the insertion point within the paragraph and choose Centered from the middle popup list at the bottom of the screen.

> To set text off like this, type the text, then choose Block Quote from the middle popup list at the bottom of the screen.

```
This is preformatted text
Spaces and line breaks   are   maintained   within   preformatted text.   Use this to enter fragments of programs.
```

Heading 4

This is additional text.

Heading 5

You can apply the Emphasized, Strongly Emphasized, Keyboard Input, Sample Text, Bold, Italics, `Typed Code`, Bigger, and ₛₘₐₗₗₑᵣ Smaller tags by selecting text, then choosing the tag from the popup menus at the bottom of the Scientific Notebook screen.

Lists

You can create numbered, bulleted, and description lists using the tag popup at the bottom left of the screen.

1. List item 1
2. List item 2

- Bullet item 1
- Bullet item 2

Description List Each description list item has a term followed by the description of that term. Double click the term box to enter the term, or to change it.

Bunyip Mythical beast of Australian Aboriginal legends.

This is a Body Math paragraph. Each time you press the Enter key, Scientific Notebook switches to mathematics mode. This is convenient for carrying out "scratchpad" computations.